

Screening Saves Lives

Have you put off important annual screenings because you don't have health insurance?

If you are age 40-64, have no medical insurance, and are considered low-income, you may be eligible for enrollment in the Breast & Cervical Cancer Control Navigation Program.

The Breast and Cervical Cancer Control Navigation Program (BC3NP) helps low-income women receive the care they need. BC3NP can arrange for program-eligible women to receive breast and cervical cancer screenings, follow-up care for an abnormal test result, and treatment if breast or cervical cancer is diagnosed. Early detection through regular screenings can find cancer when it's most treatable, often before symptoms appear. BC3NP ensures that cost and access aren't barriers to lifesaving care.
